

What is claimed is:

Method of stabilization of operating conditions in electronic devices concluding in that from the current sensor having non-linear voltage-current characteristic which is analogous to PN transition, a signal of the negative feedback is selected with which by a former said operating conditions is established by placing of an operating point of the amplifying element on a bend of the dynamic characteristic of said current sensor.

09731049.120700